APPLE STORES IN ITALY

A lot of you coming from around the world might be iOS users, so what are you going to do if you're here in Italy and you've got a problem with your Mac or your iPhone? Well, you can try to fix it on your own, but not advisable if too clumsy or if you just can't be bothered with buying the various components and following online tutorials. That's where the beauty of the Apple Store comes in (please Mr.Cook love us and sponsor us). The Apple store Italy list is just what you wanted the most, even you Android users, just to look at the beautiful architecture and think: "My god I wish my phone company would reinvest this much money in amazing structures".

The main cities of Italy don't all have Apple Stores within the city center, they do on the outskirts, but not always "downtown". Apple store Rome Italy for example, you can find them up north and south, but pretty far away from the touristy areas, but this doesn't mean you can't get there. While they just opened an Apple store in Milano Italy, not even a month ago (Milan is going full on US-style lately opening a Starbucks and a Five Guys all in the same time-frame, and I'll say this does make me a happy boy). While an Apple Store in Naples is still not in the works, you'll find one on the outskirts towards Caserta, but at that point, it's better if you look on the Apple store finder and find any affiliated stores. Last, and never least, the Apple store in Florence, was one of the first locations to open within the center of an Italian city, plus it's in Piazza Della Repubblica and it follows the London Covent Garden location style.

So if you're sitting in front of your broken iPhone trying to type in < is there an Apple Store in Italy > we hope you find this article and find the one closest to your student accommodation in Italy.

First, we're gonna leave a list of locations and subsequently a little G-Map so you don't have to search them on your own.
